

USA Today reports on President Obama's decision to send terrorists from the prison at Guantanamo Bay to a prison in the heartland of America:

The Obama administration has notified Illinois Gov. Pat Quinn by letter that it intends to acquire a rural prison in his state for the relocation of a "limited number of detainees from Guantanamo Bay, Cuba."

The letter is a big step by Obama towards closing the prison camp at Gitmo -- and an equally big step into the political controversy over what to do with the 200 or so terrorist suspects who are detained there.

Congressional Republicans criticized the decision throughout the day. Rep. Mike Pence, R-Ind., took to the House floor to say, "by moving known terrorists to American soil, the Obama Administration is putting international public relations ahead of public safety."
